“ Betty was one of those folks that everyone who knew her felt they had a very special relationship with her. But each person was very special to Betty and yes, they did in fact each have a very special relationship with Betty. She will be missed very much by a great many people, sons, daughters, brothers, sisters, and some very close friends. God bless us all for the chance to know Betty and have her share a part of her life with us. Good bye, Sister Terry

“ The highlight of my trip to the Upper Peninsula last summer was meeting Betty. Terry had told me about her and her family's life on the farm. I knew that he called Betty every week or so, just to talk, and that, in many ways, his eldest sister was his "touchstone" with the family. Although she was in a wheelchair, recuperating from a fall and subsequent surgery, her determination impressed me. Betty was down-to-earth, forthright, and genuine; she made me feel immediately comfortable in her presence . . . and no doubt had that effect on all who had the privilege of meeting her. There aren't many Bettys in this world, which makes her loss all the more poignant.
